Editor's Message

The International Journal of Environment (IJE) was started with an aim of publishing high quality research works in the form of open access journal, from the mid of 2013. The main concept of IJE is to collaborate with various researchers, scientists and experts in diverse fields of science and technology with a major focus on environment science. Authors from many different countries, article types and burning topics are the unique features of each issue published in all the volumes of the journal.

It is very encouraging to see the articles published both in their magnitude, but also in the increasing trend. Our intention in moving the International Journal of Environment to an electronic format was that access would be increased. Using the metric of website hits, articles view and citation it appears that we are certainly moving in the right path.

This issue (Vol 4 Iss 3) of IJE has collection of guest editorial, research papers, review papers and a short communication. I hope you enjoy this issue of the International Journal of Environment.
