

Editorial

We are happy to present another milestone in the science of agricultural plant protection developed in laboratories and agricultural research fields in Nepal to an organised publication, Journal of the Plant Protection Society (JPPS), Volume 8, 2023 of the Plant Protection Society Nepal. Profound sense of gratitude is expressed to the plant protection research scientists and the science sojourners as contributors to this issue of JPPS. At the same time, the Editorial Board express a profound obligation to the elite plant protection professionals who served voluntarily peer viewers to the potential research papers submitted for publication in this, Volume 8. We keep understanding with immense hope that the outcomes of the plant protection researches in different sectors, namely entomology, plant pathology and weed science displayed in this issue will be helpful to concern scientists, technical science workers, agricultural extensionists and development professionals in the Government and Non-government organizations along with the agricultural graduates working in different sectors of crop production and agricultural entrepreneurs interested in new agriculture findings. The potential contributors who could not take part in this volume are encouraged to improve their technical research writings and their presentation within the framework of the Journal.
